

SHOW RACISM THE RED CARD

TASK 1

Stereotypes are ideas we hold about people or situations based on information we have stored or have been subjected to.

Look at these images below and decide which one is the most dangerous and why.

SHOW RACISM THE RED CARD

Who is the most dangerous? Why?

The man on the left hand side is more dangerous because he is wearing a hoody and I can't see his face and he has put his hand in his hoody and that makes me concerned that he has done something wrong.

How did you make your decision? I made my decision that he is more dangerous by looking at him and I noticed that people wearing hoody's are normally in a gang that break cars or even steal things from shops.

SHOW RACISM THE RED CARD

Who is the most dangerous? Why? I think both of them are dangerous because the picture on the right side has a caravan and in the caravan there might be an innocent person and the people that are riding might have been racist to the person inside .

The lady on the left I think is also dangerous because she has a serious look on her face that could also lead to many incidents like she might fear to kill a Muslim or she might be racist to someone.

How did you make your decision?

I made my decision by looking at the pictures carefully and realised what might happen in the picture.

Who is the most dangerous? Why?

None of them are dangerous because they don't look dangerous or because the one on the left is a Muslim.

How did you make your decision?

Who is the most dangerous? Why?

The person on the right is more dangerous because he has tattoos all over his face and body and he has clothes that might make me concerned because the clothes are spiky

How did you make your decision?

I made my decision because David Beckham I know him more and he is never racist.

Who is the most dangerous? Why?

None of them are more dangerous because they both look happy.

How did you make your decision?

I have never heard anything bad from these two ladies so that means none of them are more dangerous.

TASK 2

Why is it important to judge people for who they are, not on the way they look or for the person we think they will be? Explain fully giving examples.

It is important not to judge people of how they look because they might have a hoody and on the other picture he might not but that doesn't mean they are more dangerous wearing a hoody than a costume. Also stereotypes can be deemed to be dangerous but they can help you in other situations. We should get to know people before we make any judgements about them based on how they look or live their lives.

Challenge:

Where do you think stereotypes come from?

I think stereotypes are usually acquired in early childhood under the influence of parents because stereotypes can be observed at any age limit.

Why are they so powerful?

Stereotypes can be powerful because they can have a negative attitude but it is not fair because they can also help you.

What makes them so dangerous?

They are not that dangerous because they can help you in certain situations like keeping you safe in times of danger. However, they can give you a bad impression of someone and make you not like them because of what you believe to be true.
